What's new in Lightroom CC Lightroom has a clean interface and convenient tools for more serious photographers. Can I use Lightroom CC on my iPad? Yes. It is designed to be used on a smartphone or tablet, as there aren't any hardware issues on the iOS platform. Most iPad and Android devices also run Lightroom. However, you might have to take a little extra time to get things going. This guide will help get you started. How can I import photos into Lightroom? The first thing you'll need to do is buy a storage device. Lightroom is great for importing photos from a physical medium. Lightroom comes with cloud storage pre-installed. Adobe is one of the few companies that offers cloud storage for photographers. Both Photoshop and Lightroom come with a monthly subscription service. Adobe Creative Cloud is a monthly fee that lets you use the whole suite of applications from Adobe at a discount. Adobe Creative Cloud lets you see your files wherever you are. Cloud storage is convenient and reliable. It should only cost $12-15 a month. However, there are some downsides to the service. First off, there are certain elements which are locked into the Creative Cloud services. Things like effects and actions. This is a shame. It's annoying when a photographer upgrades to a newer version of Lightroom and lost everything because all of their filters and actions are locked inside the app. Second, it's not that simple to use. Q: z-index only works if the elements are not floated? I have the following HTML: I need to put the first level block right on top of the second level block but when I do, the z-index property only works when the first level has the class "float" applied. See the demo here. CSS: #first-level { background: #ccc; float: left; width: 20%; height: 20%; z-index: 10; } A: You need to use a "position property" instead of float, otherwise the div will not "be aligned" to the parent block. You also need to remove the default margin from the left and right since you already specified an explicit width for the div. Check this updated DEMO. #first-level { background: #ccc; z-index: 10; width: 20%; height: 20%; position: relative; }

X-ray Grating Array Optimized for 1.5-14 keV. For the first time, we present a grating array optimized to be sensitive in the 1.5-14 keV range, which is important for application to the plasma of supernova remnants. Using interleaved layers of Bragg crystals and low-Z materials, these gratings have a peak response from 7 keV to 14 keV. A total of 989 gratings

Q: Multidimensional arrays, initialize a function, string? I'm trying to create a new array where each value is equal to an array of strings. Eg: $newarray = array( "array1" => array("string1", "string2"), "array2" => array("string3", "string4") ); The code is here: function rename_array($newarray, $oldarray){ //var_dump($newarray); //var_dump($oldarray); foreach($newarray as $key => $value){ //var_dump($key); foreach($value as $key2 => $value2){ $newarray[$key][$key2] = $oldarray[$key][$key2]; //var_dump($newarray); } } return $newarray; } Some help much appreciated as I'm going bonkers trying to get this to work. How do I replace an existing object with a new, different one in Javascript? I'm trying to make the different colors of an array, like so: `var oranges = [{ color: 'orange', volume: 3 }]; var lemon = oranges[0]; var lemon2 = oranges[1]; // need help here so 'Lemon' will be replaced with 'Lemon2' var orange2 = oranges[2];` What's the easiest way to do this? I think I'm missing a basic point of Javascript. A: Arrays in JS are "zero indexed": `0 = oranges[0] // Orange 1 = oranges[1] // Lemon 2 = oranges[2] // Lemon 3 = oranges[3]`
